The Bistro Difference

Why are we different? In a word: freshness. Every restaurant serves fresh food, though, right? Wrong!

Some define "fresh" as sending a bulk processed burger patty hundreds of miles cross country at sub-zero temperatures. Others believe "fresh" french fries are cut with huge factory machines, frozen and shelved for weeks before landing on your plate. The list goes on. Not in the backwoods!

We define fresh differently.

All of our burgers are cut from fresh beef chucks, ground and pattied onsite. Our french fries arrive as potatoes, before being cut and seasoned by our chefs. In fact, every entree, salad dressing and side item is made fresh in our restaurant just for you.

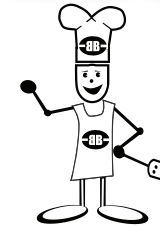

Does that mean we have to order smaller batches to ensure the freshest product? Sure. Does it mean our commitment strains our ability to compete on price? Absolutely. Will some customers go other places to get a faster or cheaper product? No doubt!

At Backwoods Bistro, however, we believe our customers want fresh, flavourful food served by friends in a local setting. That's our mission.

If you prefer the "fresh" of the "other guys", we don't mind at all. If, however, you define fresh like we do, we think you'll be right at home in the backwoods.
