The Facts About The Artifacts

Meadow Muffins is located in the Waycott Building in historic Old Colorado City. Built in the late 1800s, the Waycott Building was once the cultural center of Old Colorado City. The building has been the home of the Idle Hour Theater on the first floor, which featured vaudeville performers and later films. The Waycott Opera House was located on the second floor. Mack's Ice Cream was located in the basement where ice cream and candy were made and sold in the parlor there. The third floor was a meeting place for various city lodges.

Rumor has it that Meadow Muffins, as well as other buildings in Old Colorado City, is frequented by the spirits of past characters of the area (yes, we mean real “live” ghosts). Now mind you, the staff at Meadow Muffins has worked well in these conditions over the years, and there hasn’t been a documented sighting since we’ve been here, unless of course you talk to some of our late night employees.

Enough with the non-visible; there are numerous items throughout Meadow Muffins we would like to bring to your attention. As you walk in the front door, you will notice hanging from the ceiling (a lot of things), two buckboard wagons we were told were in the movie Gone With The Wind. On the north wall of the front room is a likeness of our matriarch Miss Muffin. As you can see, even Leonardo would be proud.

Above the front bar you will notice part of our climate circulation system. These fans purportedly are Casablanca Fans used in the famous black and white classic featuring Mr. Bogart himself. As you enter the back room, look up (you will find yourself doing this often), you will notice an Egyptian boat once used to carry the Baby Moses down the Nile River in the Biblical movie The Ten Commandments. Onward and still upward you will see a five-ton cannon used in many a war movie.

On the walls throughout are various interesting artifacts, including antlers obtained when Col. Beauregard Muffins’ stagecoach ran through a pack of wild deer while traveling down the Ute Pass. The legendary white-faced buffalo head and Mr. Moose were obtained one late evening by anonymous members of our own staff when they got lost after a staff party (the employees, not the animals), and would up on a safari through the Cheyenne Mountain Zoo.

Last but not least, while searching around on the dance floor, notice we have a jukebox which was seen on the set of Lost in Space (honestly, I saw it myself) and a dragon shaped torpedo, which was used on the set of The Wild West Show to blow up an enemy ship.
